I have played a lot of these VR rollercoaster games and most are rubbish. This is the best one so far. Good length, great sense of speed and a lot of imagination went into the track layout. Graphically this was amazing...well done DEV. Keep making more please.... This is very short and not very good. The cart moves far too quickly, and doesn't bank around corners. Really sharp bends. Not realistic at all and therefore not very immersive.. For only a few dollars, I figured I'd give this a shot. You sit in a minecart and crash through the landscape of a desert canyon while dragons fly around. I did like the art and details that were around, and much to my surprise, my mind bought into the dramatic drops and turns to the point where I was leaning in all the right directions at every turn. This however leads me to my one issue with the experience. I finally got my first taste of motion sickness. It really wasn't from the drops either, and I feel like I could have used a few more of those. It was really from any sharp turn where the camera rotates the entire scene independent of your natural orientation. The nausea lasted for about an hour afterwards. My daughter had the same experience, yet my 5 year old son kept asking to replay it over and over. I think he did about 4 in a row with no problems.

So your mileage may vary, and I'll still give it a thumbs up. I think banking on the turns so they were more gradual might have been a help. Then again, maybe I'm finally seeing why developers have been fighting with VR locomotion mechanics for the past few years.. I have played a lot of these VR rollercoaster games and most are rubbish.
