In each session, the major features of recent developments will be discussed and incorporated into a program of lectures. The final day of the conference will be devoted to the exchange of ideas and interaction among the participants. This conference will have a major impact on future research in the field. Throughout the years the .Q: Weird mouse movement when setting panning in kivymd I have been trying to create a custom kivy panel with a custom class as the background using kv language. I have created the custom panel class in kivy. I have already set up kivy's gridlayout and it seemed to work like magic until I set the background of the panel class. Whenever I set the background of the panel class to be an image, the mouse moves really weird (in the top of the screen). It moves like dragging and dropping from right to left or up to down and goes up and down the screen. I have tried all the suggestions I could find in other questions regarding this, but they are not working. The relevant snippet of my codes are as follows.

main.py from kivy.uix.panel import Panel # Create a custom kivy panel class Note(Panel): ... def __init__(self, kwargs): super(Note, self).__init__(kwargs) class test2(App): def build(self): return Note( background_image='images/bg.jpg', background_color=255, orientation='vertical', pos_hint={"top": 0.1}, size_hint_y=0.3 ) if __name__ == '__main__': test2().run() Note.kv : size_hint_y: None height: dp(115) background_color: 0, 0.0, 0.0, 0 color: 1, 1, 1, 1 background_image: 'images 1cdb36666d

Latest version of Contents Emergence and format The emergence of the IFE, like the defeat of Revolutionary Communism, was the result of a specific conjuncture in Turkey's political and social history. The brief reign of the Third Republic in the 1920s, during which a secular and nationalistic Kemalist ideology was implemented, and the coup d'état of 1960, which brought the military to power, had side effects that contributed to consolidating the establishment of the present system. Although the IFE was proclaimed in 1960, the development of the political party system in Turkey dates back to the dissolution of the First International, or Commune of the Workers of the World, in 1920, and the foundations of the "grand coalition" between Kemalist and Neo-Destourist parties, which gave birth to the Third Republican regime and the first ever post-Ottoman parliament in 1924, when the "grand coalition" came to an end and a new period began. The formation of the IFE was the result of the decline of the Neo-Destour party, which left the need for a unified party organization that included the hegemonic Kemalist party and the comparatively large but divided sectors of the Republican People's Party (CHP). In most of the newly established provinces, the IFE was simply a continuous extension of the provincial branch of the Republican People's Party. As at the time of the Second Republic, it had an organization of varying strengths at different levels, with its legal base dating from 1919, its regular activists recruited in the 1950s and early '60s, and its support base growing during the Cold War (as part of the modernization of the state and society). Politics The IFE was founded as a centrist party, that was inclusive in terms of both its selection of candidates and organization of campaigns. Initially, it was a small party, with very limited support. This changed in the 1980s, as the youth and certain left-wing sectors of the CHP began to support it and attracted
